The Maiden's Confession BY MRS. ANN S. STEPHENS. He whispered that beloved me --But I said not yes nor no; For my limis began to tremble, And my chesks were in a glow Then I felt him bending o'er me.
And my lips were softly pressed...
Asrad rose leaves fall together,
When they fold themselves to rest.

Then he left me very slawly. As a shadow disappears— To the tumult of my blushes, To the tumuit of my binshes,
To the heaven of my tears,
He paused and looked behind himtiad he heard my broken sighs?
Did he mark me shrink and tremble In the glory of his eyes?

No! he glided from my vision;
And I heard his footsteps fail,
Like the treating down of music,
Through the vestibule and hall.
Then my heart rose full and richly, Like a gobiet brimming o'er With the fabulous old nectar, That sweet Venus drank of yore! For the Perrysburg Journal.

The Providence of God i no more responsible, because a man by improper indulgence becomes subject to oisease, that for the picking of his pockets. He is to himself what Nicholas is to Hangary.

Men buy pains, and the purveyor and market-man bring home disease. Our pious an-cestors used to bury the suicides where four roads met; yet every gentlemen or lady who lays the foundation of disease with turtle son, or lobster-salad, as really commits suicide as if they used the rope or the pistol; and were the old law revived, how many, who are now honored with a resting place in Mount Auburn, would be found at the would be found at the cross roads! It is no amazing that man, invited to a repast worthy of the gods, should stap to feed on gurbage ; or when called to partake of the Circean cup should stop to guzzle with swine! If young men imagine that the gravilleation of appetite is the great source of enjoymen they will find this in the highest degree, with industry and temperance. The epicure, wh seeks it in a dinner which costs five dollars will find less enjoyment of appetite than the Isborer who dines on a shilling. If the devotes of appetite desires its highest gratification, he must not send for Buffalo tongues, but climb a mountain or swing an axe. From the Ohio State Journal. Popular Sovereignty in the Illinois

Legislature. The Douglas Democracy in the Illinois Legis lature passed an apportionment bill for district ing the State for members of the Legislature. On Tuesday the bill was returned by Governor Bissell to the House of Representative, in which it originated, with his objections. As soon as the Governor's Private Secsetary announced his message, certain of the well bred members of that body yelled out, "Take him out !" "Knock him down," &c., and the Spesker cried out, Hall," and the Secretary and the Doorkeeper walked outside of the bar. The message was also rudely received. The Secretary, after announcing his message, handed the manuscrip to a page to take up to the Speaker's desk. As the page was going up the aisle he was caught by a democratic member, Mr. Roosevelt, who jerked him back and snatched the papers from his hand. He handed them to Mr. Green, who ordered the Governor's Secretary to take his papers, which he refused to do. Mr. Green afterwards dashed the papers on the floor. Mr. Church, a Republican member, gathered up the papers, and walking through the democratic host, deliberately laid them on the Speaker's table; whereupon the Speaker swept them from the table to the floor with his gavel, where they remained until quiet was restored. We gather these facts from the letter of the Springfield correspondent of the Missouri Democrat. Plain that the purpose of the House was somewhat akin to that which swayed the Lecompton Convention in their efforts to prevent the people own way. The following is the message which people read it and see how the pretended advocates of popular sovereignty endeavor to crush

This being substantially Fay's Early, Ann: Medium size, delicate, fine; the very objection urged against the Lecompton mon with others, it is but fair to presume that it found its way into this bill by mere oversight, and that its authors will be glad of the opportunity now afforded, to expel it, and to give the bill such shape as to fairly represent the people.

I also object to said bill becoming a law, because by it, the new county of Ford is placed wholly within the Ninth Senatorial District, and also wholly within the Eighteenth Senstorial
